

I am inspired by a writer : Matthew Johnstone. He tells the story of overcoming the "black dog of depression". So my final project borrows his idea. My piece is mainly about overcoming a black ball of depression. Since millions of people around the world live with depression, my intention is to simplify the definition of depression and let everyone including children to understand what is depression and what should you do to get along with depression. So my concept of this final project is to tell a story about " Me" and " Black Ball". Within this story, people are able to interact with my black ball by moving, pressing mouse or clicking on a specific area. This story has background music, so it is better to turn on music. The name of my piece is I Had A Black Ball Names Depression.
